THE INNER HORIZON

Tarel is a city that learned to live with the water that leaves: each story in this book looks at that same boundary from a different angle: birth, memory, love, loss, grief, companionship.

Thirty tales that embody, as fables, the same questions as the essay The Inner Horizon, with the archivist of Tarel as guide: they need not be read in order, each one stands alone, like the knots of a net that can be read from any point.
